You said you have the NHS Covid-19 app installed on your phone. One of the ways the app works is using Bluetooth technology to log other devices your phone has been close to in case someone who owns one of these devices tests positive for coronavirus. This function will not work if you turn Bluetooth off, or have switched contact tracing off in the app. Do you currently, or have you ever turned contact tracing or Bluetooth off on the NHS Covid-19 app?

[Asked only to those have the app installed; n=848]

You said you have the NHS Covid-19 app installed on your phone. Another way the app works is allowing people to 'check-in' to places by scanning a QR code as a way to keep track and alert people if someone at the same venue tests positive for coronavirus. Have you ever avoided scanning QR code at a venue (either by pretending to do it or just entering without doing so) when asked to 'check-in'?

[Asked only to those have the app installed; n=848]
