During the coronavirus outbreak the Government paid 80% of the wages of people who had been temporarily laid off (or “furloughed”) from work. The furlough scheme is due to be phased out from 1st July, with the Government paying 70% of wages in July, 60% in August, 50% in September, and the scheme ending completely by 30th September.

The Government has pushed Step 4 of the roadmap back to 19th July, but it has been reported that the furlough scheme will be phased out as planned.

Thinking about the lifting of lockdown restrictions in England, which of the following comes closest to your view?

July 19th is the date lockdown restrictions are meant to be lifted and if this doesn't happen then the government has gone back on its decision to do this	24	24	27	17	20	26	25	23	34	25	22	20	22	26	28	21	24	27	19	23	29
July 19th is just an earliest possible date and so if lockdown restrictions are lifted later this does not mean the government has gone back on its decision	59	65	55	68	63	61	59	59	42	56	65	67	63	53	53	61	59	58	61	59	56
