As you may know, three of the major energy companies have recently announced increases in their prices.

Do you think the government should introduce measures to force the energy companies to freeze their prices?

Yes, it should	70	56	84	65	75	61	81	72	67	74	59	67	76	71	66	76	69	66	73	74	72

Thinking about the idea of government freezing consumer energy bills for 20 months, and whether it is workable or not, which of these statements comes closer to your view?

Forcing the energy companies to freeze consumer energy bills for 20 months CAN'T work because if the price the energy companies pay for energy goes up they will have no choice but to pass that on to consumers	20	39	7	34	24	35	9	16	26	14	24	20	16	23	25	13	18	23	19	18	15
Forcing the energy companies to freeze consumer energy bills for 20 months COULD work because the energy companies can afford to take lower profits to protect consumers from price rises if the government forces them to do so	68	51	83	55	65	55	80	70	64	71	61	60	75	68	65	71	67	64	69	69	74

The Conservatives have attacked Labour's plan to freeze energy prices for 20 months as unworkable.

Which one of these do you think is their main reason for saying this?

The Conservatives are taking the side of the energy companies who don't want to do anything that could cut their profits	31	9	51	19	39	15	46	37	34	28	29	25	35	32	30	32	27	25	33	35	39
