Previously people had been allowed to take up to a quarter of their pension fund as a lump sum when the retire. The rest had to be used to buy an annuity - a regular income that would last for the rest of the person's life, ensuring that people had money for the whole of their retirement.

In the last budget the government announced changes to pension rules to allow people more freedom over how to use their pension fund - people could still choose to buy an annuity, or could take a bigger lump sum, or could use the money to buy alternative investments, such as property or shares.

Do you support or oppose these changes?
