The European Union is expected to agree a 2.9% increase in their budget after David Cameron opposed the original 5.9% increase requested by the European Commission and European Parliament. David Cameron has claimed the smaller increase is a "spectacular success", but other people have said he could have gone further and insisted upon a freeze or reduction in the European Union's budget. Which of the following best reflects your view?

A freeze in the budget would have been impossible to achieve, and David Cameron is right to call the smaller increase a success	31	55	12	46	30	31	29	32	27	34	36	23	31	36	25	29	26
David Cameron could have achieved a freeze or reduction in the budget had he negotiated harder, and is wrong to call the smaller increase a success	42	29	59	29	51	33	28	31	48	51	39	46	39	36	51	43	44
