Cars and commercial vehicles sold in Europe are subject to strict limits on the amount of pollutants the vehicle is allowed to emit. European emission standards define the acceptable limits for exhaust emissions of new vehicles sold in European Union (EU) member states. There are 6 standards (Euro 1 to Euro 6) through which the EU have staged the progressive introduction of increasingly stringent standards on pollutants emitted by cars (i.e. new legislation introduced every few years, with Euro 6 being most recently introduced).

Some councils in the UK have introduced a parking surcharge (or extra charge) for residents who have diesel fuelled cars, which they must pay in order to obtain a parking permit within their local area.

Some people argue that these measures have been introduced to reduce NOx (nitric oxide and nitrogen dioxide) emissions in highly populated areas, whilst others say the Euro Standard rules mean that new diesel cars available this year (Euro 6) emit far less NOx and particulate matter (soot) than four years ago and so no charges should be applied.
