The Senate recently passed a bill that would repeal Obamacare. President Obama has said he will veto the bill. There are not enough votes in Congress to override the President's veto. Which statement do you agree with more? (A) Congress should keep trying to repeal Obamacare, even if there aren't enough votes to override the President's veto; (B) Congress should work with the President and pass legislation that will change at least some parts of Obamacare; (C) Congress should not try to change Obamacare until there is a President in the White House who wants to repeal Obamacare; (D) Not sure
