The government are currently planning to reform the NHS. Currently health services are commissioned by local Health Trusts. Under the government's plans local Health Trusts would be abolished, and health services would instead be commissioned by consortiums made up of groups of local GPs. Following opposition from doctors, health professionals, some MPs and the public, in April the Health Secretary, Andrew Lansley, announced a 'listening exercise' to gather people's views on his plans.

Do you think Health Secretary Andrew Lansley does or does not genuinely want to listen to the public's views?
