The Palestinian people do not have a state. The Palestinian leadership has announced that it will table a resolution at the United Nations later this month for countries to vote on whether or not they support recognition of a Palestinian state alongside Israel, and upgrade the Palestinian status at the UN.

In principle, do you think that the Palestinian people have a right or do not have a right to self-determination?

The official leadership of the Palestinians says the time has come for Israel to end its occupation of large parts of the West Bank, and for Palestine to have the status of a fully independent nation on the West Bank and Gaza alongside Israel. The Israeli government says that the occupation should not end, and Palestine should NOT have the status of an independent nation, until there is a peace agreement between Israel and Palestine. Palestinians say that the peace process has not reached agreement for decades and they should not have to wait any longer. Each side blames the other for the lack of a peace agreement.

In this situation, do you think the time has come for the Palestinians to have their own state?
